

Sea Carries Sticky Death

Hundreds of water fowl between Shoal Bay and Ten Mile Point are dead or dying, their feathers covered with heavy fuel oil. Nothing will remove the oil and the birds afflicted will all die, experts say. Major George Nicholson holds a couple here. An SPCA official put many of the suffering birds out of their misery yesterday, but there are many more awaiting death.

Contrary Sea Fails Voyager As Fish Few

BY WILLIAM WILLIS

This is the 10th in a series of 18 articles by William Willis, 61-year-old New Yorker who sailed alone on a raft 6,400 miles across the Pacific from Peru to Pago Pago. The Adventurers' Club, awarding Willis an honorary life membership, described his voyage as "The greatest solo trip since Charles A. Lindbergh's famous flight."

NEW YORK (NANA)—Fish were an important part of my food supply, but they were not always easy to catch in mid-Pacific. For a long time after passing the Galapagos Islands off the coast of South America, I traveled in seas teeming with fish. But now I had left the Marquesas astern, having traveled about 4,300 miles and with about 2,000 miles to go to Samoa, my destination. After traveling due west for many weeks, I now turned southwest toward Samoa. It was in this region that my fishing troubles began. I was to learn that a lone voyager cannot always, in all places, count on the sea for food.

Perhaps it was because the water was growing warmer, for most fish move in cold currents. The fish had been growing fewer and fewer. Now they had died out. From the time I left the vicinity of the Marquesas—which I did not sight—until I had almost reached Samoa, I had very poor fishing. During this period, from about the second week in September until near the end of the voyage on October 15, I saw a fair number of fish on only two occasions—when I passed near Flint Island and Suvorov Island. On many days I found no fish at all; there were none in the sea.

Five Days without Catch

It happened gradually. They grew harder and harder to catch. Sometimes, late at night, I would hear one splash and break out my line. For four or five days at a time, and once or twice, even longer, I could catch no fish at all.

I lost weight. Even when I made the occasional catch, I could not keep the meat more than a day before it went bad under the equatorial sun.

City Plans Emergency Action To Prevent Ship Service Cut

City Beaches Smeared

Oil Killing Water Fowl By Hundreds

The minister of transport in Ottawa will be asked to decide who is to blame for a thick coating of heavy fuel oil on the waterfront between Cadboro Bay and Dallas Road which is killing hundreds of waterfowl.

Duck, grebe and seagulls, whose bodies have become covered with the oil, have died or are dying. Beaches, logs and rocks are smeared with it.

Oak Bay municipal engineer A. S. G. Musgrave says he will have to have notices posted to warn people to keep off the beaches. Parents should warn children to keep away from the beaches, he says.

He will meet Victoria's harbor master, Capt. Ronald G.

Newell, this morning to survey the contaminated area, after which they will compile a report to be sent to the transport department at Ottawa.

WHOSE JOB?

The big question to be decided is: Who is to clean up the mess?

If it had occurred during the summer the beaches would have been ruined for recreation. Once the oil smears the logs and rocks, successive tides fail to remove it for months.

Unless the beaches are cleared with bulldozers it remains a nuisance.

The black substance covers everything—logs, rocks, birds, and the kelp which many people gather to put on their gardens as fertilizer.

Some areas are worse than others. It is impossible for anyone to walk along at high-water mark, where the drift is, without getting oil all over feet and clothing.

YACHTS SULLIED

Yachts and boats moored at Cadboro Bay have been sullied with an oily, black scum firmly settled to the hulls at the water line. Most of them will require scraping and repainting.

D. Scott, Oak Bay boathouse operator, reports a scum of oil floating around his wharf, but he has no boats in the water.

Residents in the area are trying to help the afflicted birds. Bert Aaronson, city druggist, says he has received a number of inquiries about methods of removing the oil from their feathers.

Actually nothing will remove it safely. The birds are better killed quickly and it would be a blessing if SPCA officials took a shotgun and put them out of their misery, for they can't free themselves of the oil, he said.

ALL ALONG BEACH

On one small beach alone a photographer and reporter saw the pitiful dead birds every few yards and groups of others helpless on the sand.

Only with the greatest effort were some of them able to struggle back into the sea.

Apart from being unable to dive for their food—which they have to do to live—in picking their feathers in an effort to clean themselves they swallow the oil and die.

Those which were photographed were killed afterwards and a lot more besides.

Hundreds are already dead and hundreds more will die.

A dirty, sticky mess is the only way to describe the beaches and the birds.

FROM FREIGHTER
It is believed the thick coating of heavy fuel oil escaped from the tanks in the double bottom of the U.S. freighter North Beacon, which grounded on Great Chain Island off Oak Bay last Tuesday. It is known she ripped her hull badly.

BULLETINS

PARIS (CP)—A silver fog settled on Paris Thursday night, muffling traffic and grounding planes.

A Swiss Air Line plane trying to take off from Orly airport got lost on the runways of the vast field. After a search of an hour and a half an airfield signal car found the plane and led it back to the passenger station.

LIVERPOOL, England (Reuters)—Prime Minister Churchill's Conservatives scored an important political success in a parliamentary by-election here Thursday by retaining the marginal constituency of West Derby with an increased majority.

John Wooliam, Conservative, polled 21,158 votes; Cyril Fenton, Labor, 18,650.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuters)—The South African cabinet has agreed that Finance Minister Nicolaas Havenga shall succeed 80-year-old Daniel Malan when he retires as prime minister November 30, the Rand Daily Mail reported today.

LONDON (UP)—The British House of Commons approved the Paris agreement on West German rearmament last night by an almost-unanimous vote, making Britain the first nation to give parliamentary approval to the historic pact.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UP)—Junius Irving Seales, grandson of a former North Carolina governor and described as "leader of the Communist Party" in three southern states, was arrested last night for his underground Red activities.

CALGARY (CP)—Two doctors testified in the murder trial of Donald Winslow Henderson that the body of Yvonne Levesque was covered with bruises, both front and back, and she could have been beaten with her own shoe.

Bridge Helps In Car Chase

Raising of Johnson Street bridge brought a suspected stolen panel truck to a skidding halt early this morning after a wild police chase through the downtown area.

A young sailor was held at the scene and taken to the police station.

Wave of Protests Follows 'Threat'

Appointment of an emergency committee to uphold Victoria's interests in the face of a threatened "drastic" cut in CPR steamship service was urged on Mayor Harrison by city council yesterday as a wave of protest followed news that the reduction may come.

The mayor pledged immediately that he would act on council's request, and these other developments occurred as many groups united in a campaign to improve Victoria Vancouver service:

1. The Victoria Chamber of Commerce asked for a meeting here Monday with senior CPR officials.

2. Local shipping officials urged action to stop the obvious move, "elimination of day runs."

3. Business men accused CPR officials of "putting themselves out of business," and tapped the use of night boats on day runs.

4. Trans Canada Air Lines said it would be prepared to step up service to Vancouver if boat service was reduced.

5. All groups demanded a "fast, comfortable" service from Sidney to Vancouver.

N. R. Crump, senior vice president of the company, started the furor by stating in Vancouver that steamship service to Victoria may be cut "drastically" unless business improves.

LOSING MONEY

The operation has been losing money "for some time," he said. "We can't run the service if we don't get the patronage."

Mr. Crump would not elaborate, but the service will be under discussion during his visit to Vancouver and Victoria. Asked if it would mean cutting out either the day service or the night service, a CPR spokesman said that so far as he knew, no plans had been made.

"Mr. Crump merely said the present service was losing money, and that if there was no improvement in traffic, some reduction in service would be inevitable," he explained.

City council voted to support the committee proposal or any movement with the object of restoring a normal boat service between Victoria and Vancouver.

Proposal for the committee was made by Ald. Mrs. Margaret Christie, after Ald. Arthur Dowell drew council's attention to reports of possible "drastic" cuts.

VITALLY CONCERNED

"We in Victoria are vitally concerned in this," he said in urging council support to any movement aimed at dissuading the CPR from cutting service.

He stated that Victoria citizens are already being penalized because of service cuts the CPR has made in the past few years.

"This can't be protested too strongly," he emphasized, claiming that the only reason the company is suffering loss of patronage is the lack of service it is giving Victoria.

Alderman Dowell, showing great concern as he spoke, said CPR services and facilities here have not improved for a number of years while the company has spent millions of dollars improving similar facilities in other centres on the Island.

Ald. William Pinfold thought the chief reason CPR patronage has dropped is competition from TCA's service to the Mainland. He said the airline is now carrying some 25,000 passengers each month between the Island and Mainland.

Alderman Pinfold declared competition from TCA does not appear to be "fair competition" because the CPR is not allowed to use its air service to fly any planes between Victoria and Vancouver.

He suggested that the mayor might take up this question when he is in Ottawa next week attending a meeting of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Ald. Millard Mooney suggested the CPR would not have to worry about competition from the airline if it had a fast boat service operating to the Mainland, which it could and should do to increase patronage.

The mayor said it certainly would have made a difference to the present situation if Victoria had been given a modern boat terminus. He noted also that the city has given the CPR water rates and tax concessions in the past on the Empress Hotel and the Crystal Garden.

Following a special meeting last night, the chamber of commerce sent a telegram to CPR vice-president William R. Manson, asking for a meeting when he and Mr. Crump reach here Monday.

TEXT OF TELEGRAM

Text of the telegram follows: "Membership of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce very much alarmed by statement attributed to N. R. Crump, via Canadian Press today, to the effect that CPR is considering a 'drastic cut' in boat service between Victoria and Vancouver stop Having in mind your undertaking last spring to consult us prior to any future schedule change we are most anxious to see you and Mr. Crump during his visit to Victoria Monday stop Please advise."

At the meeting were Stuart Keate, chamber president; James Genge, W. Stacey and T. G. Denny of the harbor development and shipping group and Hector Crombie, chamber managing secretary.

"We want to find out exactly what is in their minds," Mr. Keate told The Daily Colonist last night. "We are going to tell them we are dissatisfied with the equipment and the service."

"It appears Victoria is being written off and we intend to protest with utmost vigor," he added. "We are still a little bit in the dark with the CPR."

SPCA Doing Its Best For Suffering Birds

Ted Hayward of the SPCA yesterday issued an appeal to people who have seen or gathered up water fowl that have been disabled by floating fuel oil along the waterfront between Shoal Bay and Ten Mile Point.

He says either to bring them to the SPCA office or phone the SPCA at 4-5514. In some cases the birds may be saved, he says, but in most cases they must be killed.

Gusty Gale Hits 64 Miles an Hour

Southeast winds reached gusts of 64 miles an hour in Greater Victoria last night, as wild November weather continued to harass Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

Gale warnings for the B.C. coast were issued and rain today and a wet week end were predicted by the weather office as residents of the two areas soaked in one of the heaviest rain storms on record.

The gales hit steady speeds of 30 to 40 miles an hour in this area, tearing down wires and setting a power pole afire at Beacon and Crescent in Oak Bay.

They followed a storm Wednesday which took one life, injured three other persons, flooded fields and basements, blocked roads and rail lines and caused extensive property damage.

Victoria escaped with one of the lightest rainfalls, .77 inch Wednesday and Thursday, and the outlook was for rain early today, followed by a few showers later.

At Port Coquitlam, 18 miles east of Vancouver, six families were taken from their homes by rowboat before a muddy wave from the Coquitlam River swept over three square miles of the area.

St. Catharines Wins U.S. Praise

The Victoria-based weather ship St. Catharines won praise for Canadians yesterday as she escorted a buckled 7,958-ton freighter to a rendezvous with a U.S. Coast Guard cutter this morning, believed 600 to 700 miles west of Vancouver Island.

The St. Catharines dashed 100 miles to the Pope and Talbot freighter P & T Trader Wednesday after the ship developed a nine-foot crack in her deck and down three plate joints on one side during a gale.

"She has done a very fine job," an official of the U.S. Coast Guard in Seattle told The Daily Colonist last night.

Americans and Canadians alike left those who saw the latest trip from start to finish talking in the superlatives.

The 1951 tour of Canada by the then Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh was successful too, but the present Queen—at the start at least—often appeared ill at ease because of the constant pressure.

And last year's tour of Australia and New Zealand by the Queen and the duke was marred at times by press disputes over the crowd attitudes—"too over-eager" was one London paper's comment—and the long, harrowing schedule laid on.

The Queen Mother's visit—short and hectic though it was—left nothing but

But the Queen Mother's unflagging charm and the warm reception by warm memories throughout. Even the often-anti-royalist New York Daily News saved its occasional blasts for the officials handling the tour, and had nothing but praise for the royal principal herself.

As she stood in the veranda grill of the liner Queen Mary an hour or so before sailing time Thursday, the Queen Mother was as bright and radiant as on the afternoon of October 25 when she first made her bow to North America.

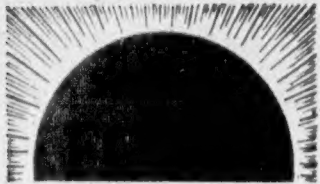

She didn't betray a sign of strain or fatigue from the tour, which left two members of her entourage on the disabled list. Lady Jean Rankin, one of the ladies-in-waiting, suffered a strained back in Williamsburg, Va., last week. The chief clerk of the royal party, Allan Wickens, came down with a severe cold in Ottawa and was flown to New York in an RCMP ambulance plane. Both were taken to the ship by ambulance.

Thus the tour ended, and not the least of the talk—was the proposal now being boomed—but not in official quarters—to ask the Queen Mother to become Canada's next governor-general.

One New York City dignitary made this very—unconstitutional—comparison on the ship Thursday morning: "If we Democrats could get Her Majesty to run against Ike in '56 we'd have the presidency."

'Sheppard' Scissors Unearthed

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—A pair of chrome-plated surgical scissors bearing the initials "M.J.S." and the name "M. Sheppard" were found half-buried in the sand at a resort 11 miles southeast of Travers City, Mich., it was disclosed here.

The scissors were found by 11-year-old Sherry Lynn Babcock during the last week of July, but police were not informed until yesterday.

Elkhart, Ind., police said they were going to the girl's home near Mentone, Ind., to see if the scissors might have any connection with the Dr. Samuel Sheppard murder case in Cleveland.

TAKEN HOME

The Babcock girl took the scissors home with her after she found them while vacationing at the Shady Crest resort on Arbutus Lake near Travers City.

Her grandmother, Mrs. Goldie Babcock, told a friend about the scissors Sherry had found, who in turn informed police.

The surgical scissors are about nine inches long and have on each blade and the name "M. Sheppard" scratched in on the inside of the blades. They are bandage-type cutting scissors.

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Rose Twynam, 64, was crushed to death by a streetcar in front of city hall Thursday before the eyes of hundreds of downtown shoppers.

Witnesses told police the woman was in the crosswalk when the westbound Queen streetcar started through the intersection. She was struck and knocked to the ground by the tram, which had to be jacked up before her body could be removed.

We bring you - THE 1955 BUICK

New thriller in Style- Power-Performance

A BRIGHT NEW FRESHNESS greets your eyes and tells you: Buick's done it again.

You see it in the bold distinction of that gleaming Wide-Screen Grille. You see it in the rakish sweep of the rear-end contours. You see it in the whole fore-and-aft newness of fleet-lined grace that marks Buick the beauty thrill of 1955.

New horsepower—up to 236

You learn more when you get the power story. Up to new peaks go the horsepower of every Buick V8 engine—a walloping 188 h.p. in the low-price

SPECIAL—a mighty 236 h.p. in the CENTURY, SUPER and ROADMASTER.

And it's new, more responsive, far abler power you can literally feel as you go.

But even bigger Buick news for 1955 is something more than style and power. It's what the "variable pitch propeller" now has done for Dynaflo Drive*.

Up goes performance —and gas mileage too

When you find it necessary to push the pedal to the floor board, you do more than call on the greatest high-compression V8 power in Buick history.

You do what a pilot does when he heads his plane down a runway.

You do in oil what he does in air—you cut down take-off time by using "variable pitch-propellers."

In this case, the propeller blades are inside the Dynaflo unit. But they're engineered to swivel or change their "pitch" just like plane propellers—and with the same result: one pitch for get-away, another pitch for gas-saving fuel efficiency.

And what you get in the way of instantaneous safety-surge with absolute smoothness, you can only believe when you feel it.

This you have to try

Of course, we want you to come and see the trend-setting new Buicks—look into the betterments in gasoline mileage that add new thrift to these spectacular cars.

But this year, "seeing" is only the beginning. So—join the crowds viewing the new Buicks, and make a date to get behind the wheel as soon as we can have a demonstrator available. We promise you the thrill of the year.

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on other Series.

Building Program Urgent UBC Need

Destruction of Brock Hall, student union building on the UBC campus, has underlined the "urgent necessity" for getting on with the university's building program, Dr. Norman A. M. MacKenzie said in a radio report to the people of B.C.

Dr. MacKenzie, president of the university, said the fire which recently destroyed Brock Hall has brought into sharp focus the fire hazard created by 304 old army huts, which are still used as classrooms, laboratories, offices, living quarters and to house irreplaceable collections and equipment.

Apart from the fire hazard, Dr. MacKenzie said, there is a need to expand facilities to cope with a steadily increasing enrolment at the university.

Student enrolment this year is 5,873, up 440 from last year. By 1964, he predicted, the enrolment will be 10,000.

Among this year's students are 500 from 57 different countries, Dr. MacKenzie noted.

One of the major projects currently in progress at the university is the creation of a school of medicine. "This is a difficult and expensive undertaking, and much remains to be done . . . particularly in respect of the buildings and other facilities needed," Dr. MacKenzie said.

MONEY PROVIDED
"We were delighted, therefore, to learn that the government is making available some of the money which was authorized by the legislature two or three years ago for the construction of a building for the medical faculty on the grounds of the Vancouver General Hospital," he said.

Money was also needed for operating revenue, he said. Teaching salaries today are below the real salaries of 1938 and 1939, because of the depreciated value of the dollar, according to a faculty committee.

"If we are to persuade the best and ablest of our young men and women to come back to the universities, rather than go off to attractive positions in industry, business and government, we will have to give them the recognition that is due and pay them proportionately."

PLANS DISCUSSED

Dr. MacKenzie spoke of some of the university's plans and dreams for the future.

He said he expected a school of Far Eastern studies would be set up within the next year or two. Improved graduate facilities, particularly in the humanities and social sciences, expansion of courses in oceanography and fisheries, regional planning and music and the fine arts, and establishment of a school of dentistry are all in the university's plans, he said.

Crash Blame Denied

OTTAWA (CP)—The government, in a statement of defense in the Exchequer Court, claims it cannot be held responsible for the April 8 air collision over Moose-Jaw, Canada's worst aviation disaster.

Federal officials said Thursday the defense was filed as a precaution in case there is a court fight involving 19 claims for damages totaling $3,632,000 by widows, children and estates of some of the victims.

Thirty-seven persons died in the crash of a west-bound Trans-Canada Air Lines-North Star and a single-engine RCAF Harvard trainer. They were the Harvard pilot, an RAF trainee, the crew of four and 31 passengers in the four-engine TCA plane, and a cleaning woman killed in the wreckage of a house struck by flaming debris.

MAY SETTLE

Officials said it is probable that arrangements can be completed to settle the claims out of court. But the defense was filed to meet court regulations and in the event of a test case involving rates of payment and federal responsibility.

Crux of the government's defense: TCA and its officers are not servants of the Crown—in essence servants of the government—and therefore the government cannot be held responsible for its actions.

Since an RAF student pilot was at the controls of the Harvard, officers of the RCAF cannot be held responsible for the crash.

The government denies that the collision occurred by reason of any negligence of the student pilot.

More Visits Urged By Royal Family

LONDON (CP)—Another newspaper has joined the fray in the press squabble over whether the Royal Family is swinging the lead. Emphatically not, says the Yorkshire Post.

"By all means let royal persons make frequent visits to the Dominions," it says. "But let it not be suggested that they do not fill their time helpfully at home."

The Conservative newspaper thus replies to the Daily Mirror which started the rumour by saying it's a pity the Royal Family doesn't do more traveling abroad.

"What can they do here? Twiddle their thumbs? Visit one another? Do the dreary social rounds?" the Daily Mirror asked in an editorial Tuesday.

The Daily Telegraph and the Daily Mail editorially rapped the Mirror's knuckles. "What nonsense! What misinformation!" said the Mail. "Stupid slander," added the Telegraph.

And the Duke of Edinburgh, breaking royal precedent, also got a word in. After a three-hour visit Wednesday to a

Birmingham factory, he commented lightly:

"Of course, ladies and gentlemen, you know what I am doing—twiddling my thumbs."

Nobody stuck up for the Mirror, a solitary voice in this type of verbal infighting. Unrepentant, the Mirror produced a front-page box: "Give your Royal Family a chance to serve. The expensive royal yacht, Britannia, was built to be used. Full speed ahead."

This deal was played total-point team-of-four and both sides missed superior contract of four hearts (If South trusts his partner's bidding, he should go to hearts rather than bid three trump; North, trusting his partner, should pass the three no-trump, expecting South to pass, at least ace-queen in clubs.) However, with both declarers operating at three no-trump, the swing came in the play.

West opened the three clubs and East's king of South's ace. Indefinite Storage of Seeds Potential Help to Breeders

A note in a recent issue of Seed Trade News is of interest, particularly to plant breeders who are frequently concerned with holding stocks of seeds in storage for future use. It states that as a result of work carried out by researchers of the department of botany at Iowa State College, indefinite storage of living dry seeds appears possible.

In their experiments corn was dried in a vacuum oven to a point where respiration rates became so low as to become almost non-existent. Thus the state of "suspended life" was reached, and the apparent possibility of indefinite preservation of living seeds stored in inert gases. Such seeds when taken out of their storage conditions showed prompt and vigorous germination.

It sometimes happens in a breeding program that old lines of breeding stocks must be discarded because the seeds lose their germinability after a few years. With the possibility of indefinite storage such stocks can be used when considered advisable at any future date and so may prove of value in the development of new varieties.

In an apparent attempt to drum up bulb business in the land by Eastern Air Lines, and KLM Royal Dutch Air Lines. Also included for the mayor and his wife will be a tour of the bulb fields and botanical laboratories under the auspices of the Holland bulb growing industry.

What with the Dixie Bulb Derby, the Daffodil Flower Drop and the Puyallup Valley Flower Festival, there seems to be plenty of scope and ideas for flower growers, bulb farmers, garden clubs, chambers of commerce and park administrators to work on if they hunger for publicity and business-stimulating projects.

The filbert crop just harvested and cured has been much heavier than usual. Flowering takes place during January and February—we have seen pollen being set free by the catkins in mid-December. Weather conditions at this season can hardly be considered favorable for the free distribution of pollen.

The filbert crop is ample evidence that pollen distribution has been adequate. Barcelona, Du Chilly, Nooksack and Braze have done best at the station. When these varieties are interplanted, pollination requirements will have been met.

Revenue from filberts cannot be considered high. Twelve hundred pounds an acre from trees in full bearing would be a good average. This means that filberts cannot compare with small fruit crops such as strawberries, logan or even raspberries. However, we do feel that where space permits a few filbert trees should be grown.

Fence lines and boundaries are good locations for a few trees. Where they will be out of the way and only limited care will be required. Home-grown filberts are particularly nice.

ferent in every one, and the design approach is also varied from the straightforward rendering to that of the abstract. Work of photographers from 28 countries is displayed.

MERIT AWARDS
Awards for outstanding merit go to T. Middleton, FRPS; Arthur Underwood, Hon. PSA; James McVie, APSA; John R. Hogan, FRSA, FRPS; Earle W. Brown, FRSA; Francisco Asmann; Melos Sunkap; Yet Pore Pun, ARPS; Joe E. Kennedy; Helen C. Manzer, APSA, ARPS; Paul K. Pratte; Pearl S. Rice; Mabel Ross; Lloyd Robinson, Jr.; Dr. Fred J. Ruch, and R. W. Super.

Other works of interest are "Birds in Flight," by Boris Dobna, FPSA; "Warsaw Concerto," by Rex Frost, and "Penguins," by Dr. Joseph H. Bricker.

There is very little work in color, but two or three of the still life studies in this group are outstanding.

PATTERNS NOTEWORTHY.
Intriguing patterns of thread spools, winding staircases, and crumbling ice and snow forms attract one's attention. A frieze of black puppies with tails hanging down makes a gay note. Several studies of babies have special appeal.

Great credit is due to the Victoria Camera Club for the organizing and handling of this show, which is the largest annual international salon of photography in the country.

There are more than 1,000 entries, many of them from countries as distant as Czechoslovakia, Palestine, China, New Zealand and France.

Boss Treats Whole Staff to Luxury Holiday

MIAMI BEACH (UP) — A happy throng of 101 employees of a Richmond, Va., drug firm danced off a train into Miami's sunshine today for a four-day office party at a swank ocean-front hotel—all on the boss.

The group of 37 men and 64 girls closed up the drug factory of the A. H. Robins Co. at Richmond Wednesday night, kissed their wives and husbands goodbye and boarded a train for Miami with president E. Claiborne Robins footing the bill.

"This is really living," said Frank Mann, assistant ad manager.

He won the race as the first to get a dip in the hotel pool and stood dripping and shouting to the "slow pokes."

Mann was one of the two single men in the crowd. There are nine single women. But only Robins brought a spouse. His wife, Lora, serves as secretary of the company and was included in the party.

Robins said the idea to shut down his factory and bring the "gang" to Miami Beach had been "sort of cooking in my mind for about a year."

"It may cost money, but they think I'm about the best boss in the world," he said.

Mrs. Catalina Britton, an Argentinian married to an American, was quick to agree. She joined the company about two months ago and was "amazed to find out that I would be in the group, too."

Mrs. Gabriela Sarm, a native of Germany, also married to an American, said the trip "is a dream come true."

Robins said he wouldn't care to advise other manufacturers to follow his example "because it might be a little tough to treat 5,000 employees."

"But it sure works for us," he said.

He has previously taken his manufacturing crew on two trips to New York, and "wish we could do it every year."

Besides the train fare, hotel and food bill, sightseeing trips and a tour of the night clubs Saturday night, Robins gave each employee $100 to pay for incidentals.

BY ROY PARRETT

Television's "Man of the Year" returns to local screens tonight.

He is no comedian or dramatic star and he has no supporting cast. He uses no backdrops.

But he commands a huge audience.

He is Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, who stars in Life is Worth Living on KING-TV at 7 tonight.

The auxiliary bishop of New York uses a completely different approach to television. He discusses the broad general subject of life in a manner which appeals to people of all faiths.

The noted educator, lecturer and author of 48 books started his program on three stations in 1952. Now he commands a nationwide audience on the DuMont network.

Bishop Sheen will be seen on KING-TV, starting in December.

The show's weekly format is a half-hour, starting in December.

The high words and good sense of Bishop Sheen have the appeal of a spiritual leader.

The dim pictures are usually cut by a heavy downpour.

The Floyd Patterson-White Tray fight from Madison TV at 11.

Exiled King of Uganda Province Permitted To Return to People

KAMPALA, Uganda (NANA)—Queen Damali tried hard to hold her tears back while the subjects of King Frederick Mutesa II of Buganda, a province of Uganda, stood and roared a governor in a code that just why the governor was so hard and harder still to decide who had won the year-long fight between the British government and King Frederick.

Uganda's governor, Sir Andrew Cohen, announced that the colonial secretary in London had declared that the king, currently living in exile in London, could return to his people. At first the Africans listened sullenly.

CATACLYSMS FOLLOW

But as the governor approached the end of the terms attached to the king's return, someone shouted "go home if it's a welcome home party for that's all you have to say." Then came whistles and catcalls.

Pleading Sir Andrew "I have a long and complicated speech back as a constitutional monarch and a very thick uniform," as the temperature soared near the hundred mark.

But the plea was to no avail. The cheering crowd of 10,000 waved yellow flags painted with their king's coat of arms and tried to overturn the governor's long black limousine. They surrounded the meeting hall and threatened to burst through the flimsy doors.

Finally, the governor strode out without attempting to complete his speech.

King Frederick was deposed by the British for obstructing the processes of government. The British courts declared he had been removed illegally.

Meanwhile, outside Kamukama's palace, 1,000,000 cheering Africans are preparing a welcome home party for handsome King Freddie.

Yet the whooping may be a bit off the mark. Freddie comes back as a constitutional monarch and the assistant pavers of the king's coronation parliament will be gone.

The Buganda people who inhabit the "biggest and most progressive area of sparsely populated Uganda," are, however, more interested in having their king back than in abiding any fine points of constitutional principle.

Governor Sir Andrew is a believer in African progress and unaided Uganda.

His complaint against King Freddie was that he obstructed the unifying of the country and thereby held back African progress.

Whatever happens, no obstruction will be possible now. Should another emergency arise, the legal path has been cleared so that Freddie could be banished a second time with out any prospect of the courts happy when Freddie rejoins pretty Queen Damali in the So perhaps everybody will be Larry Dale palace.

Hungry People Not Docile Today, Speaker Tells University Women

"Hungry people of today are not as docile as were hunger people of former generations," declared Dr. William Newton, officer in charge of plant pathology, Dominion Experimental Station at Saskatoon, in addressing members of Victoria University Women's Club last evening.

Dr. Newton was an adviser with the FAO, an affiliated agency of the United Nations in London, before he took the primary function of the association is its contribution to the maintenance of world peace by increasing the world's food production.

He said that the former tendency of the peoples of South East Asia to blame all disasters on the displeasure of the gods had largely been superseded by a realization that plenty is the result of planned distribution and improved methods of production.

Dr. Newton emphasized that helping the countries of South East Asia had become a race between East and West to determine how appeals for assistance could be dealt with most effectively. He pointed out that the Ceylonese are a proud race who want no charity, and insisted that our best service to them would be to teach them to serve themselves.

Dealing specifically with Ceylon, Dr. Newton drew attention to the fact that it is preponderantly an agricultural country and the source of the progress that is being made in establishing cacao plantations and tin.

proving the productivity of staple crops.

The FAO is endeavoring to get the important rubber producing countries to support a research unit to modernize the industry, he said.

The natural beauty of the countryside, the people and their customs were discussed by the speaker. Ceylonese were mentioned as one of the most physically attractive races in the world, of Ceylonese stock the average native has almost perfect features.

Mrs. T. B. Williams introduced Dr. Newton, who was thanked by Mrs. R. S. Twining. Mrs. A. J. Butterfield presided. Mrs. A. C. Harris, convenor of ticket sales for Theatre ments, assisted by Mrs. R. G. Hobson, Mrs. A. H. Hall and Dr. Anne Twining.

Winnipeg General Hospital graduates who had taken a course in nursing at the hospital, were mentioned as having been successful in their careers.

Among new members attending the meeting were Mrs. R. S. Twining, Mrs. Peter Cowie and Mrs. M. Ward, formerly of South Africa. Other new members introduced included Mrs. James J. F. Cowie, J. H. Ford, H. J. McLeod, E. H. Str. Kland and Miss Dorothy McMahon. Mrs. Donald Cox was introduced as an associate member. Mrs. J. L. Andrews, social convenor, was in charge of refreshments.

Gold play "Count Your Blessings" which was sponsored for the night by the club reported proceeds of $90.84 for the scholarship fund.

Chosen as Best Waterfront Pictures

Best of 200 entries in the "On the Waterfront" snapshot contest in The Daily Colonist was this candid shot submitted by Michael Sutton, a ship fitter, who won a Browne Hawkes flash camera outfit from Victoria Photo Supply and a double guest ticket to the Odeon Theatre until February 15, 1955. The three judges felt the entry had "something special," and showed both a "delicate design and a fine feeling of interest."

Photo Supply and a double guest ticket to the Odeon Theatre until February 15, 1955. The three judges felt the entry had "something special," and showed both a "delicate design and a fine feeling of interest."

The atmosphere that "means waterfront the world over" was caught by Mrs. A. C. Wilson, who won a special prize of a Kodakcraft home developing outfit from Victoria Photo Supply and a similar double guest ticket to the Odeon. The judges felt the picture "not only has clarity, but also makes very effective use of the sombre tones of a waterfront," and chose it over three other prints from the same contestant.

Ald. Macmillan Plans To Run For New Term

Robert Macmillan, Victoria's young, vigorous and outspoken alderman, announced yesterday that he will run for re-election to city council in the December 9 elections.

The alderman was first elected to council in a by-election in 1951, becoming, at the age of 28, the youngest alderman in the city's history.

His stand on civic affairs brought him reelection at the head of the polls in December, 1952.

He served in 1952 as chairman of the garbage disposal committee and has been a member of the public works committee for the past four years. He has also been a member of the Greater Victoria water board.

AIR FORCE VETERAN

An air force veteran, Alderman Macmillan was awarded the DFC as a bomber pilot. He is married, has two daughters and a son.

The alderman has proved himself fearless in his stand on civic issues, particularly during the last year.

Taking the stand that the public's right to know how its elected representatives were handling public business was being threatened, Alderman Macmillan led the battle against the mayor's secrecy by-law until this year.

The by-law closed the doors of council committee meetings to the public and allowed the mayor or the city manager to deal with letters addressed to council from individual citizens.

Alderman Macmillan was supported by Ald. Geoffrey Edgewood and Ald. Mrs. Margaret Christie but the controversial by-law eventually was approved by the mayor and the rest of council.

During the controversy which emerged at the beginning of the year over administration of the Victoria Public Library, Alderman Macmillan was strongly opposed to book censorship and "secret police methods" which he considered a threat at the time.

The alderman has fought to keep cost of civic government down.

Alderman Macmillan pledges that he will continue to seek to have "public business made public."

URGES DECISION

He declares he would like to see the issue of municipal membership on the Victoria Public Library board reach a final conclusion despite legal obstacles, which now appear to bar the way to early solution.

He said he sees nothing in the 1902 resolution which established the library through a Carnegie trust, to preclude council from launching the library board into a Greater Victoria organization.

The alderman favors formation of a Greater Victoria library board similar to the Greater Victoria water board with the city selling its library assets to the metropolitan board as it did its waterworks assets.

Alderman Macmillan said he is sure that amalgamation of other essential services, such as fire and police protection, would surely follow in the wake of what he claims would assuredly be the success of the library move.

Alderman Macmillan is the fourth and last of the incumbent aldermen this year to announce his election intentions.

PLAN TO RETIRE

Ald. Frank Mulliner and Ald. Mrs. Margaret Christie have announced they will retire at the end of the year.

Ald. Arthur Dowell has announced that he will seek re-election.

ROBERT MACMILLAN

Others who have announced they will not run for reelection are Ald. Austin Curtis, whose term on the board expires at the end of the year. Miss Jane Hargrave, business woman, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, daughter of Alderman Christie, Donald Smith, former member of city council, and Egon Nisch, an official of the fishermen's union.

For Possible Attorney-General Reference Handling of Juvenile Cases Referred to Police Commission

City council yesterday referred to the police commission the question of the handling of juvenile delinquency cases by Magistrate H. C. Hall.

The mayor criticized the magistrate last week for what he said was his failure to give the parents of a juvenile delinquent formal notice of a court hearing. The mayor claimed formal notice is required by law.

EXPLANATION MADE

Magistrate Hall later submitted to council a detailed explanation of his handling of the case in which he stated in part that it was possible some procedural error may have occurred but if so "the parents have the remedy of appeal open to them through the courts."

He said also he does not consider it the function of city council to act as a court of appeal in juvenile court cases.

Council referred the issue to the police commission "for any necessary reference to the attorney-general."

Motion to refer the issue came from Ald. Frank Mulliner, who objected to "newspaper criticism" of what he termed council's efforts to have the law enforced.

NOT INTERFERING

"Time upon time... I have stated that neither I nor the council have any idea of interfering with the administration of the law but are asking only that the magistrate administer the law as he sees fit."

The council and the public are all anxious that something that will curb juvenile troubles should be done and the question of the law being the parents into the picture is a good way of helping the situation."

The mayor stated the opinion that Magistrate Hall's explanation "unfortunately does not deal with the real and important point that was raised."

The mayor said the point is that the law makes it necessary to serve formal notice of juvenile court hearings on parents involved.

"Incidentally," the mayor stated, "I also notice in connection with juvenile delinquency in Victoria that the report of the RCMP on crime in Canada shows an increase in juvenile delinquency in B.C. of some 45 per cent."

HAS ATMOSPHERE

Mr. Sutton is a native of the Prairies who has lived here for four years. He said the camera outfit will give his photography "a little boost."

He said his picture was a candid shot, and the subject may have a copy if they get in touch with him.

Mrs. Wilson said she and her husband, a Beacon Hill Park gardener, have a dark room in their home and have taken pictures for many years.

She added, "I love the waterfront atmosphere."

Winners of 10 consolation prizes of double guest tickets to the Odeon were:

L. Cotton, 1209 Lyall; Robert Friebel, 392 Vancouver; G. W. Lake, 851 Madison; Frank A. Clapp, 857 Easter; Miss V. K. Koski, 1416 Port; Miss Alice Borce, Brentwood; Miss Virginia Ferguson, 1737 Haultain; Boyd Cooper, 4070 Lockehaven; Mrs. Audrey Turner, 4305 Columbia; and R. N. Look, 318 Michigan.

Car Insurance May Cost Less

The decrease in highway accidents in B.C. this year may bring about a proportional decrease in automobile insurance rates, it was learned yesterday.

A survey of Victoria insurance firms showed that such a drop in insurance rates may be possible in view of the steady drop in accidents throughout the province.

Several spokesmen said such a drop was "inevitable" while others merely hoped it could be brought about soon. They pointed out that the rates are set by the B.C. Underwriters' Association, the governing body of all insurance firms.

ATTITUDE SOFTER

One well-known insurance brokerage firm, Justin Harbord Ltd., was more optimistic. Director James Atkins said that in dealing with a number of firms here he had "already noted a softening in the attitude of various insurance companies."

"We anticipate as a result of the decrease in the accident ratio, a rate reduction in the not

ACCIDENTS DOWN

The car accident rate in B.C. continued to show a decline this year, although the number of persons killed in highway accidents was only one less than at the same time as last year.

A report from the motor vehicle branch disclosed that in the first nine months of this year 134 persons died on the road compared to 135 in the same period of 1953.

But the number of accidents in that period dropped from 15,553 in 1953 to 14,784 this year, a decrease of 4.94 per cent. Similarly the number of injuries decreased from 5,474 in 1953 to 4,937 this year, a drop of 9.86 per cent.

CD Unit Planned For Harbor Area

A harbor area civil defense group will be formed in Victoria, Capt. G. Ronald Newell, harbormaster, said yesterday.

The group will function independently of main Greater Victoria civil defense planning and will be concerned only with the harbor area, inside a line from the Golden Point breakwater to Wick Point. Capt. Newell said

Lauson will be maintained by the Victoria coordinator, Roger Peachey, former commander of the now defunct B.C. Police.

The two men talked yesterday. Capt. Newell recently returned from an intensive CD course at Ampring, Ont. Studies were concerned with harbor defenses, and organization in Vancouver's harbor was used as an example for the students, who represented ports from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island, and the transport department.

Council Refuses Grant

A move to have the city make a grant of $250 to the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria was defeated in city council yesterday.

Appeals of the Arts Centre for a civic grant were rejected earlier this year by council.

A motion instructing the city solicitor to prepare a by-law providing for a $250 grant was submitted yesterday by Ald. Mooney.

Alderman Mooney said the city had made a gentleman's agreement that it would match grants made by adjacent municipalities. He said Oak Bay had made a $250 grant to the centre this year and urged council to match the grant.

MAYOR OPPOSED

The mayor said he was opposed to the alderman's proposal.

Ald. Brent Murdoch said it was an insult to the Arts Centre to consider a grant of only $250. If the proposal had been for a grant of $2,500 it would have been worthy of consideration, he said.

The motion was lost on a voice vote.

Thomas Sturgess Appointed Deputy Minister of Trade

Thomas L. Sturgess, administrative assistant in the provincial department of trade and industry, has been appointed deputy minister to succeed E. G. Rowebottom.

The appointment was announced last night by Minister of Trade and Industry Ralph Chetwynd at a staff dinner for the retiring deputy, Mr. Rowebottom.

Mr. Sturgess has been with the department 10 years. He has been assistant to Mr. Rowebottom.

About 100 persons attended the staff dinner, where the department minister and Mrs. Chetwynd were hosts.

The staff presented Mr. Rowebottom with a new television set upon his retirement. The presentation was made by Mr. Chetwynd.

Flash Flood on Sooke River Breaks Booms, Sinks Yacht

SOOKE—A flash flood hurtled down the Sooke River yesterday, sinking a $5,000 launch and wiping out two huge log booms at the mouth of the river.

The 25-foot Diesel launch, set's hull. Cables and lines owned by Douglas MacFarlane, were attached to the sunken was moored above the bridge. hull and it is hoped to raise It is thought a log being the launch today.

Most of the logging roads in the district were washed out, and this has caused a temporary shutdown of operations.

The two log booms, which contained some 300,000 board feet, were broken apart by the water. Logs were strewn across the area and teams of men worked late into the night to gather them up again.

Two huge booms at Cooper Cove and the western cove at Sooke Harbor were not damaged by the water.

The water is so high in Jordan River and Muir Creek that log dumping has ceased.

The flooding was blamed on exceptionally heavy rain.

Gibbs Wondering if Soereds Planning Sale of PGE to U.S.

Oak Bay Liberals were told last night that recent government moves may indicate that the Soereds are considering selling the Pacific Great Eastern Railway to United States interests.

Average Gibbs, MHA for Oak Bay, said the B.C. Gazette on October 28 carried an application by the government to raise the share capital of the PGE by $5,000,000 to $50,000,000.

He wondered if there were any connection between the move and a meeting November 1 between Premier Bennett and the governor of Alaska, when "matters of mutual interest" were discussed.

"There have been attempts to sell the railway in the past," said Mr. Gibbs. "It is possible that Mr. Bennett has somebody on the hook."

He told the annual meeting audience of about 50 that PGE now stands for "Poor Guy's Expense Sheet."

Mr. Gibbs said the recent transfer of $2,000,000 from the hospital construction account into consolidated revenue is an indication that sales tax collections are declining.

Dr. F. T. Hanes, member of parliament for Vancouver-Bay in Canada, also spoke.

Hanes, B.C. Liberal, was unanimously elected president of Oak Bay Liberals for a second term.

Sports Patrol

By Steve Snider
United Press Sports Writer

The National League has a meeting at New York Monday and rumors that the American League will meet in New York Tuesday are being spread.

The American League, which last adopted its constitution, has been urged by Commissioner Harp to expand to 10 teams as soon as possible.

With the deadline for changes coming up on December 1, time is short but may be adequate for the National League to sign the West Coast while the American League is still negotiating from Philadelphia to Kansas City.

Both leagues have been fighting for years about moving to Los Angeles and San Francisco. The St. Louis Browns almost made it once upon a time but Second World War intervened.

Now, if the competition for the west coast baseball league of the future can be made, the two leagues will have a chance to make the move.

One report had the Dodgers and Red Sox would be admitted to the west coast but both owners of Cincinnati and Walter O'Malley of Brooklyn insist that not true.

What would the Dodgers be without Brooklyn? And O'Malley, who wants to move his club from Ebbets Field but not more than a few miles away to a new stadium still in the dream stage.

Thus, a football league adding the west makes more sense at the moment than a baseball league. The National League is in a strong position at the moment with the world championship team in the Giants and to world champion fans at Milwaukee. Even the poorest drawing club isn't a drain on the league's resources.

If one league goes to 10 clubs, the other obviously will have to follow and in the long run the league that adds the far west will want to take the lead.

Some experts predict that the National League will move to Los Angeles and the American League to San Francisco. As it turned out that was a favor to the Braves but it didn't look that way at the time.

Both American League moves to Baltimore last year and to Kansas City this winter followed wrangles by desperate men.

Each league can go its independent way in these matters but from the record so far it looks as if they ought to get together on future moves and save time for the word battle.

So far the three recent shifts all have turned out behind the scenes forces, part of it because of the rivalry between the two leagues.

The National League had to join from Boston to Milwaukee a year before the Braves were ready because the American threatened to beat them into Milwaukee. As it turned out that was a favor to the Braves but it didn't look that way at the time.

Both American League moves to Baltimore last year and to Kansas City this winter followed wrangles by desperate men.

Each league can go its independent way in these matters but from the record so far it looks as if they ought to get together on future moves and save time for the word battle.

So far the three recent shifts all have turned out behind the scenes forces, part of it because of the rivalry between the two leagues.

Giant Goalie Presents Problem

Towering Hugh Curry, six-foot, seven-inch goalie for University of Toronto's senior hockey team, presents a problem for both opposition forwards and his team manager. His rivals find it hard to put the puck past his big frame, while team officials find it even harder to outfit the 19-year-old giant. Curry needs special size 11 skates and his pads have to be built up with felt to cover his long legs. Providing a contrast in size is Varsity centre Tom Riley.

Second-Hand Dealer Charges Persecution by City Officials

Victoria city was accused of "persecution" yesterday by Leslie D. Foxgord, fined $150 in police court on two charges of unlawfully maintaining junkyards.

The quiet spoken second-hand goods dealer testified that the city hall is "hiding behind a by-law" and knows that he is not running a junkyard.

"It's a matter of persecution," he said. "There are only two people the building inspector is interested in, myself, and another person who comes here regularly."

Not 100 feet from where his cars are parked as a piece of city property, if the city is looking for a junkyard, it need look no farther, Mr. Foxgord said.

The only complaints are from the city which is "hiding under a vicious by-law," he charged.

Mr. Foxgord pleaded guilty to the first charge of operating a junkyard next to 1141 Queens Avenue without a city permit. On a second similar charge he said:

"I'm not guilty, but I'll plead guilty to get it over. This is becoming a farce."

Magistrate H. C. Hall told Foxgord the only question was whether the city was a junkyard within the by-law meaning.

"The law must be obeyed," the magistrate said in finding Foxgord guilty. He imposed a $75 fine on each charge.

Foxgord has several previous convictions on similar charges.

Two assistant building inspectors testified they visited the Queens Avenue property and saw old cars parked there.

The lot's condition last month was no different from its condition in July, said Cecil M. Pat 1011.

"All cars are junk when they are piled in such a lot," he said. "Do you think 17 cars are junk?" asked Foxgord.

Yes," replied the witness.

Abraham Hildebrand, RCN, was fined $50 or one month in jail for retaining stolen license plates, and an additional $25 or four days for having without a driver's license, when he appeared in Esquimalt police court before Magistrate Hall.

Joseph Arsenault, RCN, won dismissal of a careless driving charge in city police court.

Magistrate Hall said he gave Arsenault the benefit of the doubt as to his speed when he became involved in an Esquimalt Road accident October 14.

The magistrate said that rival race skater Lee Smith's car went out of control suddenly, before striking a parked car. Possibly, this accident was caused by a tire blow-out, he commented.

This will be heard November 27 for Lewis Todd charged with failing to deliver license plates to the motor vehicle branch on wrecking a car.

Firemen Chop Into 22 Walls

NEW YORK (AP)—Firemen had to chop through walls of all 22 floors of the Biltmore Hotel Wednesday to make sure a fire in a room on the 11th floor was out. A fire official said intense heat in the fire which extends the height of the building had started the cork insulation smoldering.

Worst Pain Conquered

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—The "worst pain in the world" is being stopped by a curious new drug described today to the American College of Surgeons.

The pain comes from a nerve ailment in the face, the disfigurement which is fairly common after 40. Attacks can last steadily for two to three weeks. Victims can't eat or even shave. Some commit suicide from the agony. Many doctors agree with victims that it is the worst pain in the world.

Surgery cutting the face nerve has been the best remedy, but that causes loss of all sensation in one side of the face and sometimes leads to eye complications.

A fairly new drug, stillbamide, seems to paralyze or somehow strike at the face nerve which causes all the pain. And it apparently acts only on that nerve.

Manslaughter Charge Laid In Hunt Death

DUNCAN—Lloyd Leroy Ferguson, 30-year-old logging truck driver, was arrested and charged with manslaughter after a coroner's jury had blamed him in the death of his neighbor and hunting companion last Saturday.

The case was involving the death of Alexander Joseph Finch, 41, who died from a bullet wound in the chest at a hunting expedition near Cowichan, B.C.

Ferguson, who testified under protection of the Canada Evidence Act, said how the two men left their homes at 118 and 120 Beach Avenue first thing Saturday morning. The two men separated.

Ferguson going to the left and Finch to the right. They met a short time later in a clearing, then separated again. Ferguson said he heard a shot, a pause, and then another shot and Finch called out he had hit a deer and was driving it out. The deer was later found dead.

Standing on a log Ferguson saw a movement in the brush and fired. There was no outcry from this shot, no outcry of thrashing about in the bush and he corrected his aim and fired again.

Finch cried out that he was hit and Ferguson went to the injured man and Finch was wounded on the upper left chest and was breathing heavily.

After making Finch comfortable Ferguson went for assistance.

Bailed $5000 in two sureties was set by Magistrate A. C. Sutton with Ferguson being held in the RCMP jail pending raising of bail.

Storms Shut Down Logging

PORT ALBERNI—Heavy winds and rain which raked this section of Vancouver Island Wednesday caused a temporary shutdown of a number of logging operations yesterday.

A small slide at Camp A Franklin River halted operations for the day, while a slide at Mile 2 on the Camp B Railway kept two skidder crews idle until noon.

A bridge over the Sarita River was washed out and kept crews from work yesterday.

Logging at Spruce Lake division is proceeding as usual.

A total of 2.88 inches of rain was measured at Mac Millan and Blonell pulp mill division Wednesday with 1.68 inches falling during the evening.

Total rainfall this month is 11.84 inches, of which 2.28 inches fell November 13 and 2.15 inches November 4.

NANAIMO—Recreation officials from many Island points will gather here today and Saturday for the first conference on community recreation to be held on Vancouver Island.

Sessions will be held at the Health Centre. Registrations will take place at 7 p.m. today.

Village Extension Ruled Out

PARKSVILLE—Village commissioners have agreed it would be unsound at this time to extend the boundaries of the municipality to take in the area between the south boundary and Englishman River.

A recent survey by residents of the area showed 45 possible users of the village water supply, while the cost of the project would be about $35,000.

At their recent meeting commissioners accepted a revised electoral roll containing the names of 365 voters.

It was decided to make a grant of $200 to be divided between the United Church and the Anglican Church for cemetery upkeep. This sum will be divided according to the number of graves in each cemetery.

Annual meeting of rate payers will be held in the municipal office at 8 p.m. November 29.

Fire Victim

MRS. RUTH GIBBS

Imparted into the death of Mrs. Ruth Josephine Gibbs, who was trapped in her home by flames after the refrigerator exploded Monday night, resulted in a finding of a accidental death from burns. The inquest was held by Dr. N. B. Hall yesterday at Campbell River. Mrs. Gibbs, 41, was the wife of Mr. J. H. Gibbs, 48, who was killed in a fire at Victoria last week.

The accident occurred at 12 miles north of Campbell River. The witness said he saw Anna Bordenluk standing over her with a shotgun.

"I saw him put the butt on the ground and the barrel near his head," continued Mr. Etherington. "He had a rag on the trigger and he seemed to pull the rag and the gun went off."

A police officer called out "Don't do it, Pete," but the accused pulled the rag and the gun went off, he said. Bordenluk fell to the ground, but the witness did not know whether he was wounded or not as the police picked him up and placed him under arrest.

A Chinese resident confirmed the evidence given by Mr. Etherington.

HAN-PAST HOUSE. Kenneth Robertson, who lived close to the scene of the shooting, said he saw Anna Bordenluk run past his house, followed by Bordenluk who was carrying a gun. He heard a shot and saw Anna Bordenluk fall to the ground beside a pile of lumber.

He saw Bordenluk standing over the spot where his wife had fallen.

"He Bordenluk bent down several times and disappeared to me that they were moving very slowly down the hill," said the witness. "Bordenluk then stood upright and pointed the gun down at his wife's body. I saw another shot."

After the second shot Mr. Robertson said, he went out and saw the accused man standing over the body and reloading the shotgun.

"Someone told him the police were coming and he said, 'They won't get me. I have a plan to get myself,' the witness testified.

Bordenluk then fired at the police and said he would pick them off like ducks, said Mr. Robertson.

"I WON'T DIE." The witness said he heard Anna Bordenluk say, "I'm not going to die" to which Bordenluk replied, "I told you I would kill you. I wanted to get Vera, too."

Vera Bordenluk, 16, daughter of the accused, gave evidence for the Crown earlier in the trial.

Accused Man Threatened To 'Pick Off' Police, Says Crown Witness at Nanaimo Murder Trial

NANAIMO—Testimony that Albert Bay Isherman Peter Bordenluk had fired at a police car, boasting, "They won't get me—I'll pick them off like ducks," was admitted as evidence in a murder trial here yesterday.

Bordenluk is on trial for his life for the slaying of his common law wife, Anna Bordenluk, at Alert Bay August 14.

Events of that fatal Saturday morning were recounted in the tense courtroom yesterday as the trial entered its third day.

Charles Etherington said he saw Bordenluk go past his house at about 7:20 a.m., carrying a long object wrapped in a grey blanket.

Later he heard a scream and a shot from the direction of the Bordenluk home and he ran up the hill to see what had happened. Before reaching the scene he heard another shot and also saw a police car racing in the same direction, he told the court.

The witness said he saw Anna Bordenluk standing over her with a shotgun.

"I saw him put the butt on the ground and the barrel near his head," continued Mr. Etherington. "He had a rag on the trigger and he seemed to pull the rag and the gun went off."

A police officer called out "Don't do it, Pete," but the accused pulled the rag and the gun went off, he said. Bordenluk fell to the ground, but the witness did not know whether he was wounded or not as the police picked him up and placed him under arrest.

A Chinese resident confirmed the evidence given by Mr. Etherington.

Youth Carried to Death

Survivors Describe Disaster at Camp

PORT ALBERNI—The dazed and shaken survivors of a small logging camp hurled into the Alberni Canal Wednesday night, yesterday told of the nightmare search for a missing member of the logging crew.

El Dufour 18 is missing and presumed drowned.

Mrs. J. W. Arden, wife of the owner of the camp, said yesterday Dufour must have been trapped in the bunkhouse which collapsed when hit by a mountain stream gone wild.

ALL INSIDE. All members of the crew were inside the building when the wall of water struck.

Mrs. Arden thought she must have been in the water of the canal for more than 30 minutes, she said, as she and other survivors were thrown into the water and estimated that the creek breaking through a dam of debris threw a tidal wave onto the side of the frame building.

James Arden, owner of the camp, told of rushing to close a door which burst open with the impact of the flood. The bunkhouse caved in as the occupants rushed to leave by another door.

According to Mr. Arden there was no answer when they called for Eli and they continued to search for an hour before loading the injured into the camp boat to cross the inlet to Franklin River camp where the B.C. Standard Oil tanker Standard service brought them to Port Alberni.

Re. Dufour brother of Eli suffered a broken leg while Archie Pietre received an injured back. Both are in West Coast General Hospital.

A third Dufour brother, Gordon, and Charles Cousins, are uninjured.

The Arden camp was to have been abandoned last night as machinery had already been moved to a new setting. The crew lost their personal possessions.

School Inspector Not District 'Boss'

DUNCAN—Allegations that school board assistant Inspector Thorpe was a "boss" in the district have been denied by school inspector B. Thorpe to cooperate and give advice were denied by Trustee when asked.

"I have given you the right advice. If you would only listen it would save you money."

A letter in the Cowichan Leader quoted an unnamed trustee as saying a school board meeting that the whole affair is a farce, and that the school inspector runs the school.

The same purpose came to the fore

Some differences have developed in recent times in connection with the seaway, natural gas and latterly the use of the Columbia River system; but not that cannot be worked out by patient, co-operative means as in the past. It is anomalous and discordant, therefore, to find a federal and a provincial, or an eastern and a western viewpoint, developing among Canadians as to how this century-old policy should be applied. Insofar as the hydro-electric potential of the lower levels of the Columbia River system is concerned the British Columbia Government is taking a progressive stand in attempting to look into that possibility at first hand. Any other stand could have been interpreted as a down-the-line policy at variance with standard policy.

It was experience Vice-Admiral Mainwaring preached before a Kentucky audience this week in talking about the Royal Canadian Navy, the experience of conventional warfare against submarines. The latter in enemy hands were a deadly menace in the two world wars of recent memory, almost to the point of edging the scale of result in each case, and unless not a single person or item of goods were to cross an ocean in any future conflict this weapon remains of potent and vital concern to all military planners. Insofar as the RCN is concerned, therefore, a navy specially geared for conventional work is the most logical in its future plans.

One may hazard the prediction that not many among these 450 lads will grow up to be men who would be careless with fire in the woods, willfully tear the branches off a standing sapling, or stamp out young forest growth. As seedling into tree, so boy grows into man; the firmer and the straighter for an encourage-

So much is this the case that the Royal Canadian Navy as of today could deploy as effective a fighting force as was at its disposal—not at the beginning of the last war but at its end. That is putting the past into proper perspective in relation to the future. Whereas the postwar RCN had been reduced to only nine ships in commission in 1951, the reannexal of military strengths forced on the western allies in recent years has resulted in no fewer than 56 warships of the RCN now being in commission. Within the compass of its capacities the RCN at least does not intend to be caught napping.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A NEW "get tough" policy in the provincial public works department is raising grumbles from some of the outside workers.

Several weeks ago, orders were issued from the top down away with the ten-minute coffee break that outside workers had enjoyed as a privilege.

And meters known familiarly as "stool pigeons" were placed on cranes, bulldozers, graders, trucks and other vehicles.

These meters keep ticking from the moment a machine starts the day's work until it trundles back into the yard.

As long as the machine keeps moving a pendulum makes a mark on a circular disc. But if the vehicle stops, a tell-tale gap is left on the disc.

And every gap in the record—even of one or two minutes—must be accounted for at the end of the day.

If a vehicle halts while the driver gets instructions from an engineer, the stop has to be explained.

If the driver stops to put up line-stakes, or to give directions to a lost motorist, or to make way for passing traffic, or any of 101 other necessary tasks, the machine simply records it as lost time.

Some of the boys are very peeved about the new policy. They say they weren't cheating in the first place, and they consider this "Big Brother" treatment an insult. The net result of the "get tough" policy, they suggest, will be lowered morale and lowered efficiency.

Certain private firms have used the "stool pigeon" gauges. In the case of one firm, the drivers all tore the gauges out by the roots, and they were not replaced.

The public works boys are not going to try any such tactics. Jobs are too scarce these days. But some of them are pretty angry.

What next? Meters for picks and shovels, to show how often they are lifted per day? Mileage meters for pens and typewriters?

Veteran early-morning pianist Al Smith, and his CIVI team-mate, announcer Walter Cowden, are featured in the December number of TV Radio Mirror. The article praises Al Smith's knack for sending listeners to work with a smile, and cites his achievements as a "musical memory man."

Back in Prince Albert, Sask., Al Smith offered his listeners a deal: The listener would pay 25 cents to charity if the pianist could play any given tune; Al would pay 25 cents himself if he failed.

"Six hours later, at 2 a.m., Al had played 374 requests from memory and had been stumped on only two."

Memor to Elmer Wheeler: They're looking for a man who failed to complete your course. He learned about "selling the sizzle," but he didn't stay to hear that you have to deliver the steak.

Root-Pruning Bears Fruit

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Root-pruning is one of the most successful ways of inducing an unfruitful orchard tree to produce blossoms and fruit, but make no mistake about it—it is a major operation, and, like surgery of the human body, should be looked upon as a last resort, after medication and nutritional correctives have failed.

It is a laborious job, and it is important to be sure that the patient's condition really warrants the surgery before proceeding. Root-pruning pays off only when the tree is overly vigorous in making branch and shoot growth without forming blossom buds, or when trees trained against a wall are making too much growth for their allotted space.

When leaves go

The operation should be performed as soon after leaf-fall as possible. Young trees, in their fifth to ninth year, which are making exuberant growth, are best checked by being dug up with a good ball of soil around their roots and simply replanted. The digging should be done immediately under the outside reach of the branches, and any long tap roots going straight down should be cut off cleanly, with all exposed thickish woody roots cut short.

In replanting, it is important to see that the young tree is oriented as it was before, with the north side of the tree to the north, and so on.

TOO MUCH TO ASK

Weather, sun, prevailing winds, and so on have all had their part in shaping the growth of the tree, and it is too much to ask of the patient that it should have to re-orient itself to its new position after the operation. After all, your purpose in root-pruning is to scorch the tree, to remind it that life is fleeting, and that it had better be getting on with the job of reproducing its species.

Where the tree is too big to lift, it is sufficient to dig a trench about two feet deep around the roots and cut off all exposed roots.

The inner wall of the trench. You need a spade with the edge dressed with a file to razor sharpness for this job. The spade should also be thrust inward under the tree at the bottom of the trench as far as possible, to amputate any plunging tap roots which can be reached. The soil should be replaced firmly in the trench, and the tree staked, as its wind anchorage has been weakened.

Root-pruning is also useful where cordon or wall-trained trees, especially plums, are outgrowing their space. Continual butting back of the extension growth seldom results in fruitfulness, and a much better plan is to bare the root system around the tree occasionally and sever some of the larger woody roots at about 24 feet.

Dwarf and wall-trained apples and pears seldom require this treatment, as they are grafted upon special dwarfing roots, but there are no such non-vigorous roots available for the stone fruit trees—plums, cherries, peaches, apricots, etc.—and root-pruning provides the only means whereby these kinds can be confined to a restricted wall area.

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters)—Mme. Claude Kogan, petite, 35-year-old French dress designer, has set up a women's mountain climbing record by reaching a height of 25,496 feet on Mount Cho Oyu, world's seventh highest peak and a neighbor of Mount Everest.

A friend of mine who has

Mark realized, now, that when Rocco's hands had rested on the desk edge he must have pressed a signal button. Out of the corner of his eye Mark saw a stocky figure standing in an adjacent doorway.

Then Mark moved in a flash. The rest of it was so kaleidoscopic that Brannon recalled only the highlights. The stocky goon in the connecting doorway, on the verge of reaching behind him and shutting the door as he spoke to the detective . . . And Mark, moving so swiftly that the man missed the door and missed his shot, the first slug boring into the wall inches above Mark's head. And Rocco streaking for another door, disappearing down a hall as Mark's one quick shot floored The Rock's goon.

Then, somehow, they were outside in the night, beyond the wide parking area, and Rocco's shadow, dodging figure was attempting to reach a particular parked car. There were more shots, and shouts, as other men came to the gambler's aid.

Lead spanged into a car near Brannon. He held his fire. He heard a woman scream in fright as she started down the front steps of the isolated club. He caught a glimpse of Rocco's tall figure off toward the front of the grounds. The Rock had changed course, hoping that his associates would pick off the detective when he, himself, drew Mark into the open.

Then there—were blinding headlights moving down the road into the grounds, with Rocco darting across the driveway in front of the twin bright beams. Mark fired then, angling toward the approaching car. There were more shots, behind him.

A booming voice bellowed out in the confusion. It came from a figure that had jumped from the arriving car.

Sam Henkel!

Rocco paused once in his flight, turned and fired at the massive sergeant. But as he did so a spotlight flashed to life on the police sedan and trapped the gambler in its cone of white.

Henkel fired once. Rocco's hands flung up as he ran. Then he stumbled and pitched forward.

Mark felt a nerve twinge in his throat, but he appeared to talk casually.

"You've never been quite sure about that girl April, have you, Rocco? Not sure whether she is really dead or alive. The night she inadvertently witnessed a shooting at your club, you ordered a lad of yours named Al to get her away from there. She knew Al. She thought, poor kid, that she was getting a ride home." He paused an instant, then added softly, "But she never reached home."

The Rock sat motionless, his cold eyes unchanging.

"That same night," continued Mark, "before your man Al ever got back to your place, he was gunned by some hood from a rival gambling syndicate. He never had a chance to report to you. So you were never absolutely certain about April."

Still the gambler remained mum and immobile.

"Then there was my secretary, Roberta," continued Mark, tensely. "She looked so much like April. That's why I hired her. I had her drop in at those popular night spots where April used to go. Your clubs. Others. The minute I knew you were having Roberta watched, I yanked her off the assignment. I took over, Rocco, as you well know. But it worked; you have shown your hand."

Brannon's tone became edged with ice. "But Roberta's fate was sealed when Ewing called her in to be out of the office. So you had Roberta rubbed out, along with Ewing, to cover your trail."

Rocco finally moved. His big hands reached out and gripped the edge of the desk. He reminded Mark of a culture. His eyes still had not changed expression.

"It's certainly too bad," Rocco said, "that the man the police captured at Roberta's apartment in Clancy tonight—died. A corpse isn't much of a witness in court, my friend."

Rocco's quick eyes caught the tightening of Brannon's lips. He smiled thinly. But the movement of Mark's right hand was sudden and smooth. The .38 appeared in his fist.

"Get up, you —!" he ordered.

Rocco stood up slowly and almost casually, but the voice behind Mark was far from casual.

He commanded, "Up with the hands, pal!"

Two marvels entered my mind as my ears listened to the concert of our own symphony orchestra last Monday night. The first was the competence of the musicians, and the second was the rigidity of a certain religious temperament.

It is not so very long ago that we attended these concerts more out of a sense of duty than of pleasure.

Well, I remember the first time I heard Victoria's symphony orchestra! It was in either '46 or '47. What a struggle they had in getting through the "Morning" of the Peer Gynt suite.

If Grieg really felt like that, then it was black coffee all the way 'round!

But now things are quite different, and any aggregation of musicians which can play through the complexities of the last of Brahms' symphonies with cohesion—as our men and women did on Monday night—deserves the proud support of all our citizens.

It is a pity that more people do not think so.

The making of music is an art of civilized man.

Any brute can beat upon a tom-tom. Even Tarzan has no difficulty in slapping his chest in many rhythms and venting a cry which is a cross between the squeal of tortured rubber and a bubble-blocked the archetonic line of a great symphony of sound, a man must walk upright and fix his eyes upon the stars. It takes spiritual capacity to do that.

That is the difference between Tin Pan Alley and Carnegie Hall.

The little tunes which come and go—which are whipped into a frenzy called "jazz"—these are all earth-bound. They minister to the bodies of men and not their souls.

And all the Stan Kentons in the world will not eradicate that difference.

When man explores the beautiful, the good and the true—even in musical sound—he explores the Being of God.

This brings me to my marvel.

Why do certain religious minds invoke the letter of the law to prevent the sale of tickets to such a symphony concert on the Lord's Day?

How much better it is for the spirit of man to be fed by the inspiration of good music on that day of all days than to content himself with the hum-drum activities which pass for recreation on the day of rest.

A friend of mine who has strong views on the commercialization of Sunday opposes such a concession being granted to the Victoria Symphony Society.

Yet, his radio is on full blast pouring out sound—music and speech, comedy and drama—during the sacred hours of his Sunday.

True, he did not purchase a ticket to sit in on the performances, but somebody was being paid to produce his entertainment, and he, as a matter of fact, was paying towards it by even providing the electrical energy which brought the programs into his living room!

Inconsistency can be a charming thing. But inconsistency with hypocrisy is evil.

Sea Carries Sticky Death

Hundreds of water fowl between Shoal Bay and Ten Mile Point are dead or dying, their feathers covered with heavy fuel oil. Nothing will remove the oil and the birds afflicted will all die, experts say. Major George Nicholson holds a couple here. An SPCA official put many of the suffering birds out of their misery yesterday, but there are many more awaiting death.

City Plans Emergency Action To Prevent Ship Service Cut

City Beaches Smeared

Oil Killing Water By Hur.

The minister of transport to decide who is to blame for fuel oil on the waterfront by Dallas Road which is killing hundreds of waterfowl.

Duck, grebe and seagulls, whose bodies have become covered with the oil, have died or are dying. Beaches, logs and rocks are smeared with it.

Oak Bay municipal engineer A. S. G. Musgrave says he will have to have notices posted to warn people to keep off the beaches. Parents should warn children to keep away from the beaches, he says.

He will meet Victoria's harbor master, Capt. Ronald G.

Wave of Protests Follows 'Threat'

Appointment of an emergency committee to uphold Victoria's interests in the face of a threatened "drastic" cut in CPR steamship service was urged on Mayor Harrison by city council yesterday as a wave of protest followed news that the action may come. The mayor pledged immediately that he would act on council's request, and these developments occurred as groups united in a campaign to improve Victoria's seaport service.

1. The Victoria Chamber of Commerce asked for a meeting here Monday with senior CPR officials.

2. Local shipping officials urged action to stop the obvious move, "elimination of night boats."

3. Business men accused CPR officials of "putting themselves out of business," and urged the use of night boats.

4. Trans Canada Air Lines said it would be prepared to step up service to Vancouver boat service was reduced.

5. All groups demanded a fast, comfortable service from Sidney to Vancouver.

N. R. Crump, senior vice-president of the company, urged the furor by stating in Vancouver that steamship service to Victoria may be cut "astutely" unless business improves.

SING MONEY

The operation has been losing money "for some time," he said.

"We can't run the service if we don't get the patronage," Chamber of Commerce very much alarmed by statement attributed to N. R. Crump, via Canadian Press today, to the effect that CPR is considering a "drastic cut" in boat service between Victoria and Vancouver.

Following a special meeting last night, the chamber of commerce sent a telegram to CPR vice-president William R. Manson, asking for a meeting when he and Mr. Crump reach here Monday.

TEXT OF TELEGRAM

Text of the telegram follows: "Membership of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce very much alarmed by statement attributed to N. R. Crump, via Canadian Press today, to the effect that CPR is considering a 'drastic cut' in boat service between Victoria and Vancouver. Having in mind your undertaking last spring to consult us prior to any future schedule change we are most anxious to see you and Mr. Crump during his visit to Victoria Monday stop Please advise."

At the meeting were Stuart Keate, chamber president; James Genge, W. Stacey and T. G. Denny of the harbor development and shipping group and Hector Crombie, chamber managing secretary.

"We want to find out exactly what is in their minds," Mr. Keate told The Daily Colonist last night. "We are going to tell them we are dissatisfied with the equipment and the service."

"It appears Victoria is being written off and we intend to protest with utmost vigor," he added. "We are still a little bit in the dark with the CPR."

The matter will be discussed

Contrary Sea Fails Voyager As Fish Few

BY WILLIAM WILLIS

(Copyright, 1954, by William Willis—World Rights Reserved)

This is the 10th in a series of 15 articles by William Willis, 61-year-old New Yorker who sailed alone on a raft 6,400 miles across the Pacific from Peru to Pago Pago. The Adventurers' Club, awarding Willis an honorary life membership, described his voyage as "The greatest solo trip, since Charles A. Lindbergh's famous flight..."

NEW YORK (NANA)—Fish were an important part of my food supply, but they were not always easy to catch in mid-Pacific. For a long time after passing the Galapagos Islands off the coast of South America, I traveled in seas teeming with fish. But now I had left the Marquesas astern, having traveled about 4,300 miles and with about 2,000 miles to go to Samoa, my destination. After traveling due west for many weeks, I now turned southwest toward Samoa. It was in this region that my fishing troubles began. I was to learn that a lone voyager cannot always, in all places, count on the sea for food.

Perhaps it was because the water was growing warmer, for most fish move in cold currents. The fish had been growing fewer and fewer. Now they had died out. From the time I left the vicinity of the Marquesas—which I did not sight—until I had almost reached Samoa, I had very poor fishing. During this period, from about the second week in September until near the end of the voyage on October 15, I saw a fair number of fish on only two occasions—when I passed near Flint Island and Suvarov Island. On many days I found no fish at all; there were none in the sea.

Five Days without Catch

It happened gradually. They grew harder and harder to catch. Sometimes, late at night, I would hear one splash and break out my line. For four or five days at a time,

SPCA Doing Its Best For Suffering Birds

Ted Hayward of the SPCA yesterday issued an appeal to people who have seen or gathered up water fowl that have been disabled by floating fuel oil along the waterfront between Shoal Bay and Ten Mile Point.

He says either to bring them to the SPCA office or phone the SPCA at 3-0514.

In some cases the birds may be saved, he says, but in most cases they must be killed.

Gusty Gale Hits 64 Miles an Hour

Southeast winds reached gusts of 64 miles an hour in Greater Victoria last night, as wild November weather continued to harass Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

Gale warnings for the B.C. coast were issued and rain to day and a wet week end were predicted by the weather office as residents of the two areas soaked in one of the heaviest rain storms on record.

The gales hit steady speeds of 30 to 40 miles an hour in this area, tearing down wires and setting a power pole afire at Beacon and Crescent in Oak Bay.

They followed a storm Wednesday which took one life, injured three other persons, flooded fields and basements, blocked roads and rail lines and caused extensive property damage.

Victoria escaped with one of the lightest rainfalls, .77 inch Wednesday and Thursday, and the outlook was for rain early today, followed by a few showers later.

At Port Coquitlam, 18 miles east of Vancouver, six families were taken from their homes by rowboat before a muddy wave swept over three square miles of the area.

St. Catharines Wins U.S. Praise

The Victoria-based weathership St. Catharines won praise for Canadians yesterday as she escorted a buckled 7,958-ton freighter to a rendezvous with a U.S. Coast Guard cutter this morning, believed 600 to 700 miles west of Vancouver Island.

The St. Catharines dashed and down three plate joints on 100 miles to the Pope and Talbot. She has done a very fine freighter P & T Trader Wednesday after the ship developed Coast Guard in Seattle. It is known a nine-foot crack in her deck The Daily Colonist last night.

Visit Hailed as Most Successful Royal Tour

Queen Mother Sails... Warm Memories Remain

NEW YORK (CP)—Queen Mother Elizabeth, who in three short weeks won the hearts of Americans and Canadians, sailed for home Thursday after what already is being labelled as the most successful royal tour in history.

Time and geography make it difficult to compare the Queen Mother's short visit to New York, Washington, Williamsburg, Va., and Ottawa with the 1939 royal tour when she and the late King George VI made a coast-to-coast two-month visit to Canada, with a side trip to the United States.

But the Queen Mother's unflagging charm and the warm reception by Americans and Canadians alike left those who saw the latest trip from start to finish glowing in the superlatives.

The 1951 tour of Canada by the then Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh was successful too, but the present Queen—at the start at least—often appeared ill at ease because of the constant pressure.

And last year's tour of Australia and New Zealand by the Queen and the duke was marred at times by press disputes over the crowd attitudes—"too over-eager" was one London paper's comment—and the long, harrowing schedule laid on.

The Queen Mother's visit—short and hectic though it was—left nothing but warm memories throughout. Even the often-anti-royalist New York Daily News saved its occasional blasts for the royal handling the tour, and had nothing but praise for the royal principal herself.

As she stood in the veranda grill of the liner Queen Mary an hour or so before sailing time Thursday, the Queen Mother was as fresh and radiant as on the afternoon of October 25 when she first made her bow to North America.

She didn't betray a sign of strain or fatigue from the tour, which left two members of her entourage on the disabled list.

Lady Jean Rankin, one of the ladies-in-waiting, suffered a strained back in Williamsburg, Va., last week. The chief clerk of the royal party, Allan Wickens, came down with a severe cold in Ottawa and was flown to New York in an RCAF ambulance.

Thus the tour ended, and not the least of the talk was the proposal now being boomed—but not in official quarters—to ask the Queen Mother to become Canada's next governor-general.

One New York City dignitary made this way—if unconstitutional—comparison on the ship Thursday morning: "If we Democrats could get Her Majesty to run against Ike in '56 we'd have the presidency."
